Upcoming street demolition and paving for the Madison – RapidRide G Line project

Street demolition begins as early as concrete is available

There is an ongoing general strike of concrete drivers and concrete plant workers in the Seattle area that involves companies that supply us with concrete for our project. This project, and several others, have had to pause concrete paving work until the strike is resolved.

After we have concrete supply, construction crews will begin demolishing Madison St between 9th and Boren avenues. Crews will demolish and repave the street half at a time, beginning with the north half of the street. One lane of traffic will be open in each direction during this work. Once demolition is complete, crews will form the new foundation for the road and place concrete in each section. The new concrete will take approximately three days to cure before we open it up for travel.

After the street repaving is finished, the construction team will come back in later to repair and replace the sidewalks on both sides of the street. We'll be in touch with businesses to coordinate sidewalk work.

What to expect during construction

- Crews will need to block the alley on the north side of Madison St between Terry and Boren avenues, but access will be maintained from Spring St
- Temporary parking restrictions
 - We added new permanent load zones on 9th Ave (just south of Madison St) and Terry Ave (just north of Madison St) to support local businesses
- Noise, dust, and vibration
- Typical work hours between 7 AM – 5 PM, Monday through Friday
