January 22, 2018

Number 2

The City of Seattle is committed to being a safe, vibrant, interconnected, and affordable city for all.

Week Overview

Things continued at a rapid pace during the second week of the 2018 Washington State Legislative Session with packed hearings, bills being moved out of committee, and both the House and Senate starting floor action. January 18th marked a major milestone as the Capital Budget and Hirst fix negotiations finally concluded. We are halfway to house of origin policy cutoff on February 2nd, and about a quarter of the way through regular session. Adding in the bills that were newly introduced this week, there are currently over 3,500 bills ‘alive’ at this point.

Hirst & Capital Budget Agreement Reached

Legislators negotiated and reached a compromise to address the complicated water rights problem brought about by the 2016 Supreme Court Hirst decision. This issue had been linked to Capital Budget negotiations, as Republicans demanded a Hirst fix, before they would agree to pass the bond bill required for a capital budget. The Hirst fix legislation (ESSB 6091) will allow for new wells, spend $300 million over 15 years to restore and enhance watersheds, as well as other measures to attempt to mitigate the effect of wells by developing local work groups across the state to help govern future water use.

The capital budget contains more than $1 billion for school construction, funding for mental health facilities, low-income housing projects, parks and trail development, and forest fire hazard reduction. This budget summary provides a good overview of what is in the final budget. The Legislature passed all three bills on January 18th and the Governor signed them into law on Friday, January 19th.

The legislature also made considerable progress this week on several priority bills including banning conversion therapy, breakfast after the bell, the Voting Rights Act, and Equal Pay Act.
