Summary

On February 28th, SPR hosted the third and final public meeting for the Hubbard Homestead Park play area project. Approximately 15 adult community members and 45 children attended. Many attendees were at the previous public meetings for this project and some had also been involved in the initial design of the park. SPR along with SPR's landscape architecture design consultants, Berger Partnership, PS presented the project parameters including information about the decommissioning of Victory Creek play area. Under Parks and Recreation policy number 060-P 5.12.1, a decommissioning is necessary because it is substantially out of code compliance. The decommissioning of this playground will create the opportunity to start new play area at Hubbard Homestead Park.

The meeting was open house style and featured all boards presented at previous meetings in addition to the new information for the preferred schematic design. This was done as the meeting took place at a new location to attract more community members.

The preferred schematic design option was presented in conjunction with the feedback from previous public meetings and online surveys.
