#SeattleShines Moment: Facility Electrification Efforts

Detailed Line of Business: Utility Conservation

2024 Adopted Budget: $1,060,078

(for the entire DLOB, not just the work we're discussing today)

Performance Measures:

- # facilities partially electrified – annual goal of 2
- # small buildings converted from oil to electric heat – goal of 4 by 2028

Seattle Park District Cycle 2 Investments:

- Prepare community centers for decarbonization by shrinking energy use through energy conservation interventions.
- Install electric heat pumps in smaller facilities that currently use oil heat.

Red Barn Ranch

Background

39-acre site, developed as a recreational camp with farm space in Auburn

- 1966: Elgin Baylor purchased property and advocated to develop the Red Barn Ranch to be used as a youth sports camp. Black property ownership in service for Black youth. One of the 50 greatest players in NBA History. He went to Seattle University and played for the LA Lakers.
- 1970: City purchased Property with RCO funding
- 1971-83: SPR renovated property & operated youth camp
- 1983-1994: Site used for contracted recreation uses and education programming, with periodic site closures
- 1995-2011: Camp Berachah operated equestrian camp
- 2011-14: Camp Berachah & Seattle Tilth incubator farm
- 2014-18: Seattle Tilth farm operations alone
- 2018-present: Site vacant but city engaged various community organizations seeking to develop a vision for sustainable programming at the Ranch.

The vision for Red Barn directly serves the City's Mental Health Initiative through:

- Connection with Nature
- Physical Health Benefits
- Cultural Connection & Identity
- Stress Reduction & Coping Skills
- Community Building & Social Support
- Mindfulness & Reflection

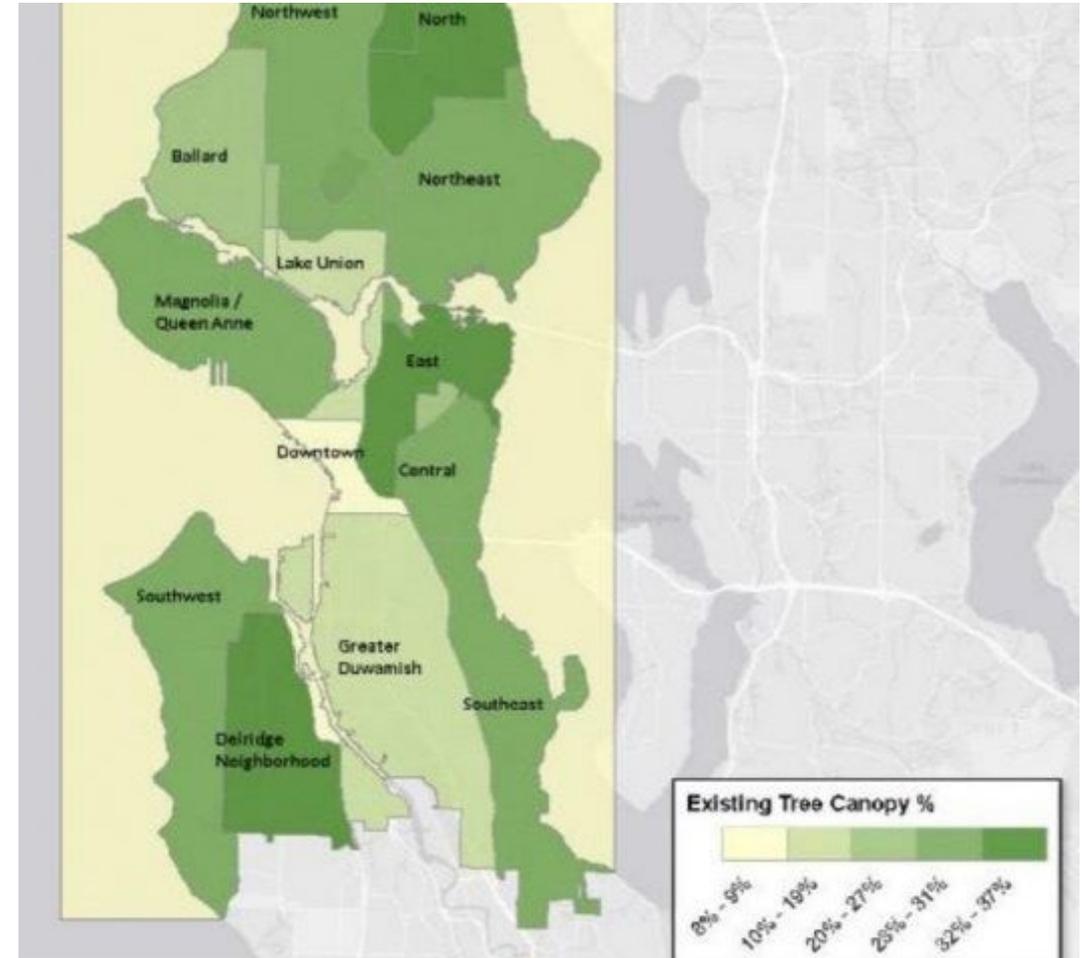

Legacy of Redlining and Nature Access in Seattle

Seattle Civil Rights & Labor History Mapping Project :

African American (left) and AAPI population (right) in the 1960s are centralized in formerly redlined neighborhoods areas like Downtown and Greater Duwamish, where there is less access to natural resources today.

Seattle Tree Canopy Cover (2017):

The legacy of redlining affects nature access today. Areas with the least tree canopy cover in the city are formerly redlined areas.
